We know there are many resources available to former members of the military. It can be difficult and often overwhelming to know where to start, where to go and who can really help.

That's why we created the Veterans Resource Corps.

There is no charge for any of our services.

Who We Are and What We Do:

The Veterans Resource Corps is a group of people who have also been in the military. We've been trained to work one-on-one with those who served. We will provide you information, answer your questions, and introduce you personally to people who want to make things go more smoothly for veterans.

We help for free -- thanks to the support of the Governor and the state, the Mayor and the city and a large group of businesses and non profit groups who are working together to make it easier for California veterans to transition back into the civilian world.

We act as the liaison between you and veteran support resources and programs - helping limit the stress in the process.

WHO IS LEADING THIS?

Governor Brown, Mayor Garcetti and AmeriCorps started the program. They have asked the Weingart Center (a Los Angeles non profit organization) to train and manage the Veterans Resources Corps team and to work with key partners, Operation PAVE, US VETS, New Directions - along with many other groups and agencies who share the goal of supporting veterans are navigating their return to California's civilian community. We are funded by Call of Duty Endowment, Deloitte LLP and Bank of America Foundation.
